HISTORY

Since 1860, the Hamelin family has been growing vines in Chablis on a 47-acre (19-hectare) Domaine. The family is both truthful to the heritage and traditions of their ancestors while at the same time using modern techniques to bring out the intrinsic qualities of the Chablis terroir.

TERROIR

The soil is generally chalky, limestone (Portlandian) and its 150 million-year-old kimmeridgian soil along with a temperate continental climate brings a distinctive minerality to the wine.

VITICULTURE & VINIFICATION

The 35-year-old vines yield 12 tons per acre (30 Hl / hectare) for the Chablis AOC. Harvest is done manually (10%) and mechanically (90%). Domaine Hamelin works in a way that is respectful of the environment by adhering to "lutte raisonnée," limiting the use of pesticides and herbicides, the emphasis is put on working the soil naturally. In the thermo-regulated winery the must comes out of the press to the tanks by gravity to once again ensure ideal quality.

AGING

Wines age in stainless steel tanks.

VINTAGE

After a cold spell at the end of April which frosted the vines in the northern part of Chablis, an indifferent May, June was hot and sunny, July also mostly fine with no hail-storms, and August for the most part warm and dry. The vintage began early, in the first days of September, and the weather then proceeded to change. It was a lot colder and wetter in September, yet the fruit was ripe, concentrated, and healthy. A very good quality vintage promising well-structured wines. The only slight drawback is the modest volume harvested.
